

Italy and my new friends

During our semester holidays Alan King, Marianne Schneidhofer, Leon and I went to Palazzolo in Italy for the Comenius project.

My host family had two kids but they were lots older (16 and 20 years), so it was hard to find things to talk about. I was surprised that they did not have breakfast at home but ate breakfast at school.

I really enjoyed being together with the other kids from the camp even though they were also lots older than Leon and me. It was interesting to find out where everybody came from and which hobbies they had. There were students from Germany, England, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Italy and Austria. Mostly we talked about sports. They were interested if we also liked skiing and if there was much snow in our country. Of course we all spoke in English with each other. My favourite friends were Davide and Marco from Italy. But it was also good to have Leon from back home with me.

All together the week was too short to get to know my new friends better. I hope I will have a chance to meet my new friends again sometime in the future.
