

PET test update

Hello PET candidates and parents,

We finally have some information to share with you about the PET test. Cambridge has officially cancelled the test day of the 23rd of April. The test will not take place on this date. However, the test is not completely cancelled, only delayed. The new test date will not be announced until the government reopens schools in Austria.

This means that we may not know the planned date of testing until we go back to school and only at very short notice. So, keep on practising whenever you can.

To help you practise please go to the following web page;
<https://www.cambridgeenglish.org/>

You will find a dropdown menu called Exams and Tests. Click on B1 Preliminary for schools (PET). Here you will find all the information you need regarding the test. On the left side there is a menu with a section called Preparation. There are practice tests and online training activities specifically written for this test.

On Tuesday the 7th of April at 14h00 there is a Webinar planned about the test to be conducted in German for A2 Key and B1 Preliminary candidates. It will provide information about preparing for the test, resources and suggestions for candidates. It is free to register. The webinar that is for you is marked in red and will be in German. Here is the information for you to register for it as well as more tips for preparation.

When we have more information, it will be posted here for you. In the meantime, you should know that we completed 90% of your training before schools closed so you are already well prepared for the test and can feel confident. When we return to school and before you take the test we will finish your training and you will be 100% ready for it.

Take care everyone and stay safe.

Best regards and high five from,

Mr. Shepherd and Mr. King
